

Communication Examples: What I can do

Do you have examples of times that you have demonstrated any of the "I can" statements? If so, use this to help you choose your exemplar/artifact and start your explanation of your learning and progress.

- I can be an active listener by giving my full attention, appreciating different perspectives, and by asking clarifying questions.
- I can communicate my learning clearly using different strategies (words, images, products).
- I can understand, share, and present information effectively to suit my purpose and audience.
- I can participate in conversations for a variety of purposes (to connect, be friendly, help, learn, and share)
- I can work with others effectively to achieve a common goal.
- I cooperate with others when working in a group by taking on roles and responsibilities. I do my fair share.
- I can engage with others to build and sustain relationships.
- I value diverse perspectives and integrate ideas of others to solve problems.
- I distribute leadership, listen actively, take turns in discussions, acknowledge contributions, and identify missing voices.
- I can play a role in monitoring the group's progress and adjust as needed.
- I give, receive, and act on constructive feedback in support of our goals, and I can evaluate and revise plans with other group members.
- I can step outside my comfort zone to develop working relationships with unfamiliar groups.
- I acknowledge different perspectives and seek out and create space for missing or marginalized voices.
