The Power of Reading with Your Child

Reading with your child fosters literacy, gives you a chance to connect with your child, and helps your child learn about their social and emotional world.

When we read with children, they come to understand the world through the characters. They learn the characters' thoughts, feelings, what drives them, what scares them, what makes them happy.

How does that happen? Dr. Raymond Mat is an expert on this. In 2017 he spoke on our panel about Empathy and the Arts and in 2014 he presented at the Roots of Empathy Research Symposium. Here is a short clip from his symposium presentation.

Now that you can see how sharing stories and talking about them with your child fosters social and emotional development, get cozy and enjoy with special reading of Mary

For a link to Gordon's book, Daniels's Day, read by Mary herself click here.
